

Elevation profiles should be used as a rough guide, not as an absolute fact that you will be ascending or descending at any specific milepoint, or for an exact number of feet. GPS units and internet mapping programs compile data from numerous sources, and results will always vary in comparison. Geobike uses software that collects data every 1/10 mile.

